

Graduate Symposium for Students of Conservation and Preservation

University of California, Los Angeles

April 27, 2pm- Lenart Auditorium

Two steps forward: Addressing challenges in the fields of conservation and preservation

Ironing out the details: Implementing non-invasive methods for classifying iron corrosion in historic structures

Amy Elizabeth Uebel
Clemson University/College of Charleston, Historic Preservation

Pitfalls and hurdles: The case of Piano Della Civita in Ardena

Leah Marangos
Rutgers University, Art History and Cultural Heritage and Preservation

Stayin' alive: Reconsidering the prohibition of sites associated with living persons from the National Register

Adam Rubin
The George Washington University, American Studies and Historic Preservation

Incorporating non-Western views into American preservation: Combining the American and Japanese models

Seth Hines
University of Georgia, Historic Preservation

The Garden of Defiance at the West Los Angeles VA Campus

Sarah Kozal
University of Southern California, School of Architecture, Heritage Conservation

Presented by students of the UCLA/Getty MA in Conservation of Archaeological and Ethnographic Materials Class of 2014
For more info see: gsscp-2013.blogspot.com or email gsscp.2013@gmail.com.